Cloud Computing – What Can Cloud Do for You?

IRVINE, Calif., November 11, 2009. Hear our impressive panel of experts share their insight on the benefits and risks of using cloud computing in the workplace. Despite huge advances in computing power, the world's IT infrastructure is overwhelmed by increasingly complex and huge amounts of data. So, along came "cloud computing" where processing, storage, networking and applications are accessed as services over networks, public and private. It allows us to manage this huge volume of data being generated by nearly a trillion devices, objects, processes and people.

Expert Speaker Panel

Tim Caulfield, Founder and Partner at Capto Consulting, Inc., will serve as moderator.

Bruce Maches: Consultant and contributor to Cloud Magazine

Josh Crowe: Vice President of Managed Hosting & Cloud Computing, Savvis Communications

Paul Laskin: Co-founder and CIO, Cirrus9

Joe Luna: Managing Partner, Logic Security

Sylvia Garcia: Director IT, Santarus, Inc.

This topic and speaker panel will provide relevant insight to IT professionals at all levels, such as developers, project managers, analysts and directors. Also, professionals who support IT organizations from staffing and recruiting, to product vendors should find significant value. This will also be a great opportunity for college students preparing to graduate, and high school students considering a technology career.
